New York Stock Market

New York, January 17 .- Speculative the stock market to-day, and the sudden transpositions offered some violent contrasts. Demand for stocks at one time early in the day was so impressive and seemed to be coming from such influential sources that the tone of the speculation became very hopeful.

There was nothing in the immediate situation to explain the pressure on the market. The money position worked easier, and the weekly bank statement of Saturday gave warrant for confidence in the security of the money market from any further strin-

The acute weakness of the transcon-The acute weakness of the transcontinental railroad stocks to-day indicated misgivings on the score of decreased traffic, as well as possible redistribution of traffic growing out of the opening of new Pacific coast extensions. This was a factor in the weakness of the Hill stocks and St. Paul. The further postponement of the suit to dissolve the Union Pacific merger was made the occasion of some early strength in that stock, but it was among the weakest in the later selling. Several of the day's Supreme Court

Several of the day's Supreme Court decisions, which upheld the contentions of the corporations, were made something of in the effort to raily prices. The satisfaction of the demand to cover shorts on the part of the bears about exhausted the buying at the record price level, and the subsequent collapse placed prices lower than the low prices of Saturday mornting. The railying power was feeble and the closing tone weak.

Quotations Wiped Out.

Augusts, Ga., January 17,—All spot quotations were wiped from the board at the Augusta Cotton Exchange today and across the face of the space these words were written:
"Nothing doing."

The last previous quotations were 15 cents, but to-day buyers and sellers were so completely apart that the exchange committee declined to quote a market. This is the first time in Augusta's history that such a thing has occurred. Augusta, as the second largest inland cotton market, is the third point in the belt to "wipe out" quotations.
